I think there is some difference between Local Boards and others. In the former case Supply of Stationery may be allowed from at Govt. Expense, as they are more or less agents for carrying on the Extended activities of a civilised Govt. There is besides greater inter-relation between the Govt. and the Local Boards than between the rel. bodies & the Govt. The Self-Govg in a rel. Council is much more complete than in that of a Local Board though these abstruse considerations need not enter into the decision of the question, the Supply would appear to be desirable from a practical point of view as thereby the Local bodies may appeal to Govt. for large State grants The Rev Secty. may be consulted.

Addl. The Local Boards may be treated at par with the municipalities and the G.O. of ~~the~~ 31st Jan 1920 made equally applicable to the former. The District Boards have made provision in their budgets for the purchase of stationery etc. The practice in British India is noted ~~above~~ in para 24 of the linked file
